Product review

By the editor

Ever been riding and your fingers got so cold you couldn't feel them? Harley Davidson offers a choice of heated gloves so that could never happen again. The "dual source gauntlet" is the style I chose. They plug into the bike via the battery tender adapter or separate connector to the battery. There is an available rechargeable battery pack you can purchase instead so that you don't have the wires running down inside your jacket. The packs go into little pockets built into the backs of the gloves. The gloves are very comfortable and work great, so great at times I actually have to turn them off. Controllers are also available separately. The Gauntlet set comes with the gloves and the on off switch only, wires and adapters are available separately. The shorter style comes with gloves, switch and required wiring but are only available in mens. Harley Davidson offers a full line of heated clothing including vests pants and socks. The heating elements in the gloves have a lifetime warranty, the rest of the glove one year. Go online to www.harleydavidson.com for prices and other accessories. If your hands are gonna be in the cold winter wind you might think about adding heated gloves to your riding gear.
